Chris McCullam – Head of Business Architecture

Biography

Chris has been working in Financial Services for over 20 years, covering a wide range of business transformation projects across different product distribution models.

Joining Altus in 2009 he has spent most of his time working for a variety of investment and platform businesses; using his experience of advice, distribution and architecture method to help shape technology and operational transformation in response to regulatory and strategic changes.

Over the last two years Chris has taken responsibility for leading the Business Architecture practice within Altus, ensuring the models and frameworks are enriched, refined and deployed to most effect across consulting engagements.

Chris is passionate about making sure projects and programmes deliver the right changes by having a clear, structured view of what the business is seeking to achieve.
